Fudan Undergraduate Chen Ciyu Awarded University Student of the Year

Recently, Chen Ciyu of School of International Relations and Public Affairs of Fudan University (Class 2017) received the honor of University Student of the Year Awarded by Shanghai Education Commission. The Award was established to encourage university students to be courageous to pursue their personal dreams as well as the “China Dream”. 20 students entered the final list, and eventually, Chen Ciyu was selected as “Student of the year” along with other 9 students.

As a third-year undergraduate, Chen served in three World Expos in the past decade. In the meantime, she devoted herself in the academic study, applying her knowledge to social services, exhibiting the brilliance of Fudan students.
Chen Ciyu’s life was intertwined with the World Expos. She was awarded twice “Little Expo Volunteer” when she was a little girl, received the honor of “Excellent Volunteer” of 2010 Shanghai Expo, and served at Milan Expo in 2015. During the process, she grew from a volunteer to a volunteer manager, and she went from home to abroad. By promoting and serving in World Expos, she exhibited to the world the bright prospect of the young generation in China.

Last year in Milan, Chen Viyu worked as a volunteer manager for the Chinese corporate pavilion, during which she worked for more than 600 hours in 50 days and managed over a team of 20 volunteers.
