Former Indonesian President Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono Visits Fudan

On the morning of May 27, Dr. Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono, former Indonesian President, visited Fudan University on the occasion of the 111th anniversary of Fudan and delivered an academic talk entitled “The deepening and developing relations between China and Indonesia” in front of nearly 80 teachers and students from the Institute of International Studies. Professor Wu Xinbo, Executive Vice President of the Institute of International Studies, presided over the event.

Dr. Yudhoyono is the first democratically elected President in Indonesia. During his two presidential terms, he led Indonesia to overcome the financial crisis, and natural disasters like the Indian Ocean tsunami, terrorism, etc., achieving steady political, economic, social development. Indonesia has thus become a regional powerhouse and a member nation of G20. For this reason, the governing decade of Dr. Yudhoyono (2004-2014) is extolled as "the golden years" of Indonesia by the World Economic Forum.

In his talk, Dr. Yudhoyono spoke highly of the achievements of China's development, and expressed great confidence in the prospects of China’s economy. He also commended the development of bilateral relations between China and Indonesia, and anticipated the prosperity of China and Indonesia in the future. Dr. Yudhoyono closed his speech by encouraging the young generation to keep an open mind, bravely embrace their dreams and opportunities, and believe that success is proportional to efforts. After his speech, Dr. Yudhoyono took questions from the students and the teachers, and had a heated discussion with them.
